Graduate Operations Committee Meeting

The mission of Student Research Week (SRW) is to recognize and celebrate student research at Texas A&M University. SRW aims to highlight the excellence and broad range of this research to the University community.

Student Research Week exemplifies Texas A&M University's long-standing commitment to providing educational research opportunities for students at all levels. The event is planned and funded by the Texas A&M Graduate Student Council (GSC) along with funding from other Offices and Colleges.

Student Research Week will be held March 25-29, 2013. In 2012, we had 200 undergraduate and 350 graduate participants, 200 volunteers and over 250 judges. Provided below are some of the changes or improvements we wish to see in SRW 2013:

- Increase faculty participation as judges, panelists or speakers in SRW 2013
- Better interaction between faculty and students especially undergraduate students
- Include workshops and seminars catering to a wide variety of departments across campus
- Collaborate with industry professionals conducting research and have them participate as judges or speakers. This will help students get a better understanding of ongoing industry research related to their field of interest
- Provide letters of recommendations or appreciation as a token of recognition to departments or faculty involved in SRW 2013
- Increase student participation in SRW 2013 through classroom publicity (subject to approval from faculty members)
