Extension Professor
Mississippi State University

Structural Change and Outlook for Row Crop and Rice Production Agriculture in the Mississippi Part of the Mississippi Delta

Dr. Lawrence Falconer is an Extension Professor at Mississippi State University, and works with the Delta Research and Extension Center. His research mentioned above includes an overview of changes in crop production patterns since the implementation of the RFS and increases in poultry production in the Southeast. The presentation will include some thoughts on how those changes will impact Texas producers.
